

This book may be of good interest to the advanced learners in Economics and Business Administration particularly to those having special focus towards regional economic integration, interregional and international trade policy, miasmatic effect of politics on economics undermining efforts to foster intra-regional and international economic co-operation etc. However, the economists, politicians, business researchers and diplomats may find the study as an epitomized, concise, concentrated and thought provoking one in their respective field. The general readers, informed layman and people of all callings may also find reflection of their own feelings and sentiments in the texts of the study.

SAARC

SAARC is undeniably an association with huge potential. Blessed with vast natural resources with 1.7 billion manpower and a strategic geographical positioning, it has immense potential to become the 3rd largest economic and political power bloc of the world. In this critical time of globalization, we can no longer afford to be victimised by politics, and must work in unity to create a viable and prosperous economic union.
