

Chapter 5

Laws According to Subject Matter : In Operation and Repealed

5. An Overview of the Chapter

In this chapter the laws have been categorised according to subject matter and then presented in alphabetical order. Needless to say that the subject head categorisation of laws by the authors has been subjective, reflecting the perception of the authors. The task is of such a nature that if this effort is undertaken for a second time by these authors it is not unlikely that this will result in some changes leading to the inclusion of some law/laws or dropping some law/laws from a particular subject head, insertion of new subject head, deletion of subject head, amalgamation of one or more subjects, etc. If one particular subject head does not satisfy the reader in his/her search in that case it is suggested that the search should be extended to another subject head of similar nature. The authors do not claim that the subject head presentation of laws is exhaustive. It should, however, be emphasised that the endeavors of the authors undoubtedly will serve as the starting point of any search for laws on the basis of subject. If one does not find any particular law under a particular subject head then it is suggested that the search for the law be extended to Chapter 4 where parent laws¹ have been presented² and Chapters 10 to 13 which contain the laws not in force in Bangladesh.³

¹ The term 'parent laws' has been used to mean the laws which were enacted first on any issue or subject, as opposed to subsequent amendments/s of these laws at later periods. For further see, overview section of Chapter 4, of this Compendium. For Rules, Regulations and Other Bye-laws framed under parent laws, please see Volume III, Chapters 6 to 9 of this Compendium.

² To access the laws in chronological order, please consult Volume I, Chapter 2 of this Compendium.

³ Laws that are repealed, expired or spent are to be found between Chapters 10 to 13 and have been placed in Volume IV of this Compendium.

Both existing and repealed laws⁴ have been placed under respective subject heads. This will give the readers an opportunity to find both present and past laws under particular subject head. Laws in this chapter have been presented under fifteen hundred and ninety six (1596) subject heads according to alphabetical order.
