PREFACE

A thorough revision of forms has been made in this edition, together with the radical and comprehensive revision of the rules in Volume I. There has been a reclassification of the forms under the following heads:—

(1) Accounts forms—

- (i) Occasional forms, (A) 1 to (A) 13.
- (ii) Registers, (A) 14 to (A) 33.

(2) Registers—

- (i) Primary, (R) 1 to (R) 11.
- (ii) Subsidiary, (R) 12 to (R) 41.
- (iii) Statistical, (R) 42 to (R) 49.

(3) Periodical Returns and Statements —S (1) to (S) 33.

(4) Judicial Forms—(J) 1 to (J) 62.

(5) Process Forms—(P) 1 to (P) 85.

(6) Miscellaneous Forms (M) 1 to (M) 57.

An attempt has been made to rationalise and simplify the forms. Those obsolete and useless have been eliminated while those retained have been modified to meet actual requirements. In several instances forms have been amalgamated, while in others there have been certain introductions and innovations in order to secure a higher degree of administrative efficiency and better supervision.

The forms for monthly and quarterly statements have been greatly simplified and their number has been considerably reduced. These forms are intended mainly to provide materials for administrative purposes so that proper control might be exercised over the working of Subordinate Courts.

The total number of forms in the last edition was 357 against 319 in the present edition. The Account Forms, Registers, and Periodical Returns and Statements, which numbered 150, have been reduced to 115, i.e., approximately by 24 per cent. The forms prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code have also been modified where necessary to suit present requirements.

PREFACE

As a result of the revision of the rules in Volume I, a few forms have had to be omitted and only such changes have been made in the rest as the amended rules were found to require. Opportunity has also been taken to incorporate in the present edition all the amendments that have been made to the forms by the issue of correction slips since the last revision.
