

International Trade Law

Statutes and Conventions 2008–2009

Routledge-Cavendish Core Statutes provide a comprehensive series of essential statutory provisions for the core subjects and major options on the LLB, GDL or LLM.

Each book in the series

- provides the precise wording of Acts of Parliament and is unannotated, making it ideal for both course and exam use
- is updated annually to incorporate all of the latest legislation covered in most UK law syllabi
- features consolidated amendments, avoiding the need to cross-refer to amending legislation
- contains both alphabetical and chronological contents listings and is fully indexed.

PREFACE

The study of International Trade Law requires access to a wide range of materials, many of which are not easily accessible, and the purpose of this book is to provide students with those documents which they are likely to be referred to in courses on this subject. We have provided extracts from statutes and conventions, all of which have been reproduced in their amended and updated form. In this edition, we have included the United Nations Conventions on the Use of Electronic Communications in International Contracts, 2005, the United Nations Convention Against Corruption, 2003 and replaced the UNIDROIT Principles of International Commercial Contracts, 1994 with the 2004 version.

In the statute section new material includes the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations (in place of the equivalent Directive) and the Railways (Convention on International Carriage by Rail) Regulations 2005. Amendments to the existing text have been made by a wide-ranging number of statutes and orders including the Police and Justice Act 2006, the Serious Crimes Act 2007 (both of which amend the Computer Misuse Act), the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Regulations 2007, and the many amendments to the Civil Procedure Rules.

The collection is necessarily highly selective as the potential range of material is very wide; nevertheless we believe we have selected all the documents which a student is likely to come across in any standard course on International Trade Law. We also believe that the materials in this collection will be of use to students following courses on commercial law and carriage of goods. We hope that this will provide a convenient and relatively inexpensive method of access to materials which might otherwise not be easily available.

The collection is divided into seven parts: Statutes, Statutory Instruments, European Union Materials, Conventions, Rules and Model Law, Standard Forms and Standard Trading Conditions. The material in the first four parts is arranged in chronological order (and alphabetically within years) and the material in the remaining parts is arranged alphabetically. The material is printed in its amended form, but we have not indicated the source of these amendments and the text is printed as amended even if that amendment is not yet in force. Sections which have been omitted or repealed are noted.

The collection contains material available to us up to 1 April 2008.
